

Daily Democrat
SECOND EDITION.

STATE NEWS.

VERY BAD TREATMENT.—We skinned an editor in the Green river country the other day, and his raw, bleeding flesh, still living, apparently, lay quivering on the beautiful set line in beautiful velvet, the romantic, shadowy banks of Green river. Since then, the neighbors have been shocked, and some amused, especially at the fellow's receiving in his raw hide, and returning it to his former master, who is a "miserable scoundrel," whose plots spank him, was nothing to our benevolent administration of the all-recovering law. It winds up with an engraving in which the Louisville Democrat is trying to pull a donkey raising the Green river Democrat, against the positive resistance of old Kentucky and driver, who wish to go on Salt river.

Southern Schutte, a prominent citizen of Mayfield, died very recently.

The body of John Wells, lost off the golden Era, near Cabin creek, Mason County, has been recovered. The body was bleeding profusely at the mouth and nostrils, and only 40 feet of 400 ft was found on his person. There were no marks of violence.

Messrs. Norman and Wadrow were arrested in Lebanon for whipping a colored girl named McElroy. She had stolen two dollars of a gingham dress from Mrs. Norman and was sent to jail.

There are twenty-four thirty-candela lamps in the Mars Hill church.

Rev. C. B. Parsons is in Beckenridge county.

Georgia is to be surprised from the Cincinnati waterworks by a fluvial pipe.

A monument is to be given to Cynthia, for the Circular Monumental Association. What are they going to do about it?

PETER EVERETT.—We had the pleasure of meeting Capt. Everett, a day or two ago, and found him up from Arkansas, where he is engaged in plowing. The Captain says Arkansas will be a "white State." Most of the negroes in the state who will not leave the negroes.

He was up with his modern improvements, nearly finished; is the new Episcopal church.

The weather for the last two or three days has been terribly warm.

Five acres of darkness assembled at Yuker's woods, near Versailles, on a pine, last week.

MARRIAGE LICENSE.—A marriage license issued in Shelby county for the month ending July 1, 1867.

J. S. S. Custer & Anna Brannan, John S. Custer & Lizzie Lewis, John S. Custer & Anna Vardonem to Anna Brown, F. W. Graham to Isabella Green, Lewis L. Coleman to Fiddle C. Bentley.

BENEFICIAL SOCIETY.—The first of persons whom marriage licenses were issued during the month of July, by the County Clerk of Fayette county:

T. J. Boyd—Mary E. Bassett (see W. H. Hartin)—Amelia J. Snider, James M. Graves—Addie G. Allen, Louis C. Johnson—Anna Collier couples during the same month.

A letter to the Lexington Observer and Reporter says:

LEXINGTON AND BLAND RAILROAD.—It is so plain to every thinking man that the Bland road is to be built, and the road that will give us cheap fuel, timber, iron and steel, and make Lexington a manufacturing city, and greatly enhance the value of the city, that it is difficult to understand why it does not receive publicity.

"That was sensible," said MacCormick, "when a man's life becomes a burden to him, it is better to end it than to let it drag him down."

He thought the thought amused him. There was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He then took a number of aspirins, and though the thought amused him, there was something very peculiar and impressive in his manner. Not long since, as he was walking home, he resolved to commit suicide by taking morphine, and only a few days ago he dashed off a large dose of nitrate of silver, of course over-dosed, and was soon in convulsions, and he thought it was over.

When told that he was a dead poison he manifested a great surprise, and said, "I am not a dead poison, but I am a dead man."

He